GITA, the association for geospatial applications to infrastructure for more than 30 years, is ramping up for their 2009 conference and exhibition. GITA 2009's conference theme is "Find Your True North", which will share new directions of the geospatial industry. In addition, this event will show better ways to design, plan, manage and maintain your geospatial systems and operations.

Infotech Enterprises America, Inc. will participate as an exhibitor showcasing our GIS service offerings to the Utilities, Communication, and Transportation sectors. We will have a force of eight Infotech staff, which includes three who have been selected to be a speaker at the event. Our speaker's topics involve migration to the next generation platforms, cross-culture communication techniques, as well as the development of Quality Assurance (QA) programs for large geospatial projects. To top off this exciting event, Infotech will also be introducing our new service offering: 3D building and texturing services.
